Histoire d'Espagne et de Portugal depuis les temps les plus reculés jusqu'à nos jours Boston : Roberts

One of Canada's most important art alliances made history by demanding recognition for its members as professional, contemporary artists at a time when they were routinely excluded from the mainstream art world.

Profession of Faith of a Savoyard Vicar UNESCO

Exploring the geographic area of southern France that has been largely neglected by historians, this book attempts to identify the forces producing change. Concentrating on an analysis of the Radical movement and the wine industry, the author combines four approaches to the study: those of history, electoral sociology, quantitative analysis, and human geography.

America Now Springer Science & Business Media

The goal of this book is to provide a current overview of the impacts of climate change on tropical forests, to investigate past, present, and future climatic influences on the ecosystems with the highest biodiversity on the planet. Tropical Rainforest Responses to Climatic Change will be the first book to examine how tropical rain forest ecology is altered by climate change, rather than simply seeing how plant communities were altered. Shifting the emphasis onto ecological processes e.g. how diversity is structured by climate and the subsequent impact on tropical forest ecology, provides the reader with a more comprehensive coverage. A major theme of this book that emerges progressively is the interaction between humans, climate and forest ecology. While numerous books have appeared dealing with forest fragmentation and conservation, none have explicitly explored the long term occupation of tropical systems, the influence of fire and the future climatic effects of deforestation, coupled with anthropogenic emissions. Incorporating modelling of past and future systems paves the way for a discussion of conservation from a climatic perspective, rather than the usual plea to stop logging.

The Sasia Story John Benjamins Publishing

This collection of essays examines the racialized and gendered effects of contemporary politics of belonging, issues which lie at the heart of contemporary political and social lives. It encompasses critical questions of identity and citizenship, inclusion and exclusion, emotional attachments, violent conflicts and local/global relationships. The range - geographically, thematically and theoretically - covered by the chapters reflects current concerns in the world today. A timely contribution to the ongoing debates in the field, it will be a valuable companion to scholars working in the areas of multiculturalism, globalisation and culture, race and ethnic studies, gender studies and studies of post-partition societies.

The Education of Children SAGE

This pioneering anthology of Middle English prologues and other excerpts from texts written between 1280 and 1520 is one of the largest collections of vernacular literary theory from the Middle Ages yet published and the first to focus attention on English literary theory before the sixteenth century. It edits, introduces, and glosses some sixty excerpts, all of which reflect on the problems and opportunities associated with writing in the "mother tongue" during a period of revolutionary change for the English language. The excerpts fall into three groups, illustrating the strategies used by medieval writers to establish their cultural authority, the ways they constructed audiences and readerships, and the models they offered for the process of reading. Taken together, the excerpts show how vernacular texts reflected and contributed to the formation of class, gender, professional, and national identity. They open windows onto late medieval debates on women's and popular literacy, on the use of the vernacular for religious instruction or Bible translation, on the complex metaphorical associations contained within the idea of the vernacular, and on the cultural and political role of the "courtly" writing associated with Chaucer and his successors. Besides the excerpts, the book contains five essays that propose new definitions of medieval literary theory, discuss the politics of Middle English writing, the relation of medieval book production to notions of authorship, and the status of the prologue as a genre, and compare the role of the medieval vernacular to that of postcolonial literatures. The book includes a substantial glossary that constitutes the first mapping of the language and terms of Middle English literary theory. The Idea of the Vernacular will be an invaluable asset not only to Middle English survey courses but to courses in English literary and cultural history and courses on the history of literary theory.

We think we know ourselves too good, but the truth is that we can always be surprised.... Kate (Verona) was a fragile girl, full of dreams, but now she is sitting in Doctor Carter's cabinet, where she has to convince him, that she didn't want to commit a suicide. But all evidence are showing the opposite. The reader is involved in a very dynamic and emotional conversation between the two characters, which shows the transformation every one of us is going through, when we love, believe, dream, suffer... "To all, who lose themselves when they love" ... "Two weeks ago the 32-years old celebrity Kate Johnson, alias Verona, was hospitalized with high amount of poison for rats in her blood. Her agent discovered her fainted on the floor in her hotel room. Kate was holding a bottle of red wine and in the other hand a broken glass." "Jesus, another arrogant newborn star, which couldn't handle the stress of being famous and rich!" - Tom was thinking." "Tom was looking at her, but couldn't find even a sign of sadness, she was telling this story as it was about someone else. "But she is Kate, .. and Verona at the same time, .. Typical for people, who went through a hard moment. They are escaping from the reality, creating a comfortable zone in the face of a new personality, which is the opposite of their character." "She asked: "Tell me, dear, how can I help you? What is your wish?". At that moment Kate felt like she is going to crash on the ground. The pain she was feeling was enormous, too intensive. It felt the same way as when she saw that ugly scene with her sister and Romeo. Kate replied to the woman: "I want to be senseless! I do not want to have any feelings, nothing, ..completely nothing! ." 'She never let anyone to stay over the night. Never let anyone closer to her heart. She had no friends, just wealthy hypocritical acquaintances, like her." "When we are losing or not achieving something, no matter how much we are dreaming of it - we should take our lesson - maybe this wasn't meant to be for us, maybe it had to happen this way, to take us to the point from where we will achieve something better. Every lose is a win and it is not just a cheap phrase, it is the truth, if you are not losing, you will never be improving. To be first in life, you should be comfortable with being second, first." "One very kind woman, Lady Diana, said once, that the biggest disease for the people now is that they are feeling unloved. I am not going to advise you as a doctor, Verona, ..but..." An end nobody expected...

The Idea of the Vernacular University of Toronto Press

This book is an anthology with a difference. It presents a distinctive variety of Anglo-Norman works, beginning in the twelfth century and ending in the nineteenth, covering a broad range of genres and writers, introduced in a lively and thought-provoking way. Facing-page translations, into accessible and engaging modern English, are provided throughout, bringing these texts to life for a contemporary audience. The collection offers a selection of fascinating passages, and whole texts, many of which are not anthologised or translated anywhere else. It explores little-known byways of Arthurian legend and stories of real-life crime and punishment; women's voices tell history, write letters, berate pagans; advice is offered on how to win friends and influence people, how to cure people's ailments and how to keep clear of the law; and stories from the Bible are retold with commentary, together with guidance on prayer and confession. Each text is introduced and elucidated with notes and full references, and the material is divided into three main sections: Story (a variety of narrative forms), Miscellany (including letters, law and medicine, and other non-fiction), and Religious (saints' lives, sermons, Bible commentary, and prayers). Passages in one genre have been chosen so as to reflect themes or stories that appear in another, so that the book can be enjoyed as a collection or used as a resource to dip into for selected texts. This anthology is essential reading for students and scholars of Anglo-Norman and medieval literature and culture. Wide-ranging and fully referenced, it can be used as a springboard for further study or relished in its own right by readers interested to discover Anglo-Norman literature that was written to amuse, instruct, entertain, or admonish medieval audiences.

Transnational Rules in International Commercial Arbitration Рипол Классик

This is the first critical edition of The Wars of Alexander, a Middle English poem dating from the late 14th or early 15th century and based on the popular Latin story of Alexander, Historia de Preliis.

Taking account of the two different manuscripts in which parts of the poem appear, the relationship of the poem to its source, and the poet's metrical practice, the editors include an introduction, critical variants, and full explanatory notes and a glossary.

An Ottoman Mentality Macmillan Higher Education

This volume focuses on priorities for research in language pedagogy. The aim is to give an up-to-date overview of current thinking about important research issues such as the viability of large scale comparisons, the quantitative/qualitative research controversy, new trends in language testing and evaluation, and the role of different learning environments. In their discussions of these issues researchers from the US and from different countries in Europe show to what extent the priorities differ on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

Papus' 1893 book on Magic was the first to bring together all the Grimoires into one book, and provide a clear path of study to perform the Solomonic Rites. He brings his scientific mind to argue that experimentation in the astral is just as important as scientific inquiry, as he takes us on a fascinating journey through late 19th Century France.

The following chapters focus on specific contributions to a film's impact: the script (including writers), the director (or "auteur"), the actors (especially gender differences), and the music (both scores and songs). Finally Simonton addresses the question of whether the same cinematic factors that make some films great also make other films bad: Are bombs the exact opposite of masterpieces? The book closes with an epilogue on future directions in scientific studies of cinematic creativity and aesthetics. What do researchers need to do if we want a complete understanding of what it takes to create a powerful cinematic experience? --

This study places the inscriptions found on Athenian vases in the context of the early development of writing in Athens. Focusing on the period from the invention of the alphabet in the 8th century

B.C. to the early 4th century B.C., when the local alphabet had been supplanted by the common Ionic script, the book presents inscriptions on stone, both public and private, scratched inscriptions on pottery, including the political ostraca, and some inscriptions on lead tablets. Although the vase inscriptions are brief, they number in the thousands and give an accurate picture of the art of writing and the state of literacy in the Classical Period.
